3. Considerable time has been spent in the study of the various forms of the verb 'to be' in the various languages. The results of this study are as follows: The verb 'to be' is found in all languages, and is one of the most important words in the vocabulary of every language. It is used in many different ways, and its meaning varies greatly from language to language. In some languages it is used only to denote existence, while in others it is used to denote a state of being, or a quality. In still others it is used to denote a relation of identity, or a relation of causality. The study of the verb 'to be' is therefore a very important part of the study of language.

and hope of exchanging the spirit of the things you can make my cause and my efforts the your cause. I am expecting much of you and the my effort and I trust you will be able to make my cause your cause and make my cause your cause I am sure you will be able to
