

Henry F. Leopold and Benj. Heller to Furnish the Goods and Supplies for the D. & W. Railroad.

Of course all the old residents of Duluth know how Messrs. Brans & Finckle, of Moorhead, and J. W. Raymond, of Bismarck made their fortunes, viz: by being permitted by the N. P. railroad company to follow along with that road as it was being constructed, and furnish goods and supplies to the thousands of laborers working thereon; and, ever since it became known that the Duluth and Winnipeg road is actually going ahead, Henry F. Leopold, our wide-awake young clothier, has been figuring to make a similar arrangement for himself with this road; and, through the influence of influential men, he has succeeded in so doing; but as it is evident that the work on this road, will, after a little time, be prosecuted with great vigor, and as the business of furnishing supplies for such a road, will be much more than any one man can attend to, Mr. Leopold has associated with him in this important business enterprise, Mr. Benj. Heller, of the firm of Heller & Co., who, although a comparative stranger in this community, appears to be an active, energetic, wide-awake, level-headed young man; and, for a business of that sort, it strikes us that Messrs. Leopold & Heller will make about as good a team as could be yoked up together. We hear that they will at once put in a large supply store on Rice's Point, where will be kept everything in the way of groceries, provisions, clothing, boots and shoes, hats and caps, &c., &c., that will be demanded by the army of men that will soon be employed on that road.

We congratulate Messrs. Leopold & Heller on their good fortune in securing so valuable a business privilege; and on the other hand, we congratulate the road upon having for its supply agents, a couple of young men who will be apt to keep always on hand all the stores and supplies that may be needed either for the company or its employes.
