LABOR SITUATION IS IMPROVING

Arbitration Boards Are Making Setgether

Denver Printers Formulate an Acceptable Agreement-Chicago Situation Not Menacing.

Arbitration is winning the country over. The long list of settlements of difficulties, to be found in the organized labor department of this issue of The Labor World, indicates the trend of matters. Though no great organizations like the National Civic Federation are being called upon, local arbitration boards are doing effective work.

Dénver workingmen and employers alike are happy over the settlement of what appeared at one time to be a struggle that would beggar all classes But, happily, the conciliation board of eleven will devide what is right in the way of wages, hours of labor, recognition of the unions, and Denver labor conditions generally. The Omaha situation, too, is clearing. There the conciliations being affected are mainly through private parties and informal meetings; and though not dignified by the names of arbitration boards, yet practically this is what they are.

The Chicago situation is not at all The latest calculation based on the returns gathered this spring by the canvassers for the directory indicate that within Chicago's limits is a population of 2,200,000 souls. If but one, in four are wage-workers and this is a safe estimate, considering the women and children at workthe army of labor in this city aggregates 550,000 persons. At the outside there are not more than 25,000 persons here on strike or locked out. In fact, there are less than 12,000 on strike, the others being locked out or laid off because of lack of raw material, or because the employers are trying to force their employes to accept the terms offered. It is thus seen at a glance that, comparatively speaking, industrial peace reigns in this great city.

The talk of a lockout of 25,000 stock yard employes is not taken seriously by the labor leaders, and particularly by those acquainted with stock yard work. These industrial establishments by the very nature of their work cannot collectively shut down. And ever if they did it would only compel the workingmen and women employed there to change their location and not their employment; for meat would be in demand, and cattle would be killed and other packing houses would rush to supply the m .ket, employing the very men locked out in Chicago.

The accusatic is made by employers in the metal trades that their workmen have violated agreements by going out on strike, is serious. It is affirmed to be true by some workmen and denied by others. In so far as it is true it is a blot on the trade union movement, and the officers of national organizations to which the erring members belong cannot be too severs in disciplining the wrong-doers. New strikes are bing reported daily in the newspapers, with glaring headlines. The settlements, if reported at all, are compressed within half a dozen or less lines, in fine type, in an obscure

Confidence on both sides is essential to industrial progress and prosperity. The interruptions to trade during national campaigns is due to a lack of confidence of capital in the policies of political parties other than those under which the government is being conducted. In the same way trade is interrupted by employes losing confidence in the honesty of purpose of employers. WAR RAGING BE-TWEEN MONOPOLIES

Money Giants Fighting Each Other. Battle Takes Violent Form.

Western Union Poles Cut Down and Burned and 14,000 Miles of Wireis Destroyed.

New York, May 27.-Talk about violence on the part of organized labor The "other fellows" with their supposed culture and abhorrence for harsh methods, are now above running to extremes with their interests are in any way en-

A splendid example of the detsruction of the property of one great corporation by another great corporation is now going on before the eyes of the American people. The war is between George J. Gould, of the Wabash Railroad, and A. J. Cassett, president of the Western Pennsylvania Railroad. The property of neither of these railway systems is being touched, but the Pensylvania is destroying millions of property belonging to the Western Union Telegraph Company, principally because George J. Gould owns the controling interest in this corporation.

A Monopoly Was Menaced. The reason for this ebullition of violence is on account of Gould daring to Pittsburg with his Wabash Railroad, threatening the monopoly of the vast trade of this steel and coke center which the Pennsylvania Road has been determined should be its special pet

So the Pennsylvania road to "ge even" with Gould, ordered him to remove all his Western Union Telegraph poles and wires from the right of way of the road. This battle has been waging in Wall Street and in the courts for months, but it was changed from peace ful to violent methods when, of Friday, thousands of men started with axes to cut down the poles bearing the 14,000 miles of Western Union wires that encroached on the Pennsylvania road's property.

Up to this time these poles and wires had been protected by injunctions, but the victory of the railroad company in the United State Court of Appeals, the first of the week, gave Mr. Cassett the opportunity he had been waiting for and immediately he ordered the offending wires removed.

Postal System Comes in. All the poles of the Cape May and Atlantic City divisions of the Pennsylvania were cut Friday. Throughout Pennsylvania locomotives are being used to drag out the poles. Great bon fires are burning up the timbers. In many places trolley currents are short circuited by the falling wires and telephones interfered with.

In round number the territory covered 1,000 miles, for which there were about 40,000 poles and 14,000 miles of wire. The poles, complete with cross arms, etc., are worth $8.00 a piece which brings their total cost up to $320, 000. The cost of the wire, considering that much of it was old iron wire, figures up to $500,000, and the expense of putting up poles and wire was fully $180.000. Therefore a conservative es timate of the loss to the Western Union would be $1,000,000.

In addition to the property loss, the Western Union (Impany will be asked to reimburse the Pennsylvania Railroad for the expense of chopping down the poles and tearing down the wires. This will be no small item as thousands of men were employed for two days, and scores of special trains run from division points to distribute the army of pole choppers. The Postal Telegraph Company has been waiting for eight months for an opportunity to install its own system of wires along the Penn sylvania right of way. The railroad company will now put up and own the poles for the Postal system and lease them to the latter company. Work on the new system will begin at once.

PHILLIPS' SHOE CO. NO. 218 WEST SUPERIOR STREET

The history of the Labor Movement shows that it has advanced step by step, each succeeding year bringing about improved condiitnos. There are many causes which have aided, and are still aiding in bringing about these improved conditions.

One of the most prominent reasons for this advancement is the fact that influential concerns which are important factors in the growth of cities have their support and encouragement. The Phillips Shoe Company, for example, has always shown a disposition to be fair, and reasonable in their at titude toward Labor and in their extensive business as Wholesale and Retail Shoe Merchants, have never done anything which would tend to be a draw-back to the cause of labor or the purpose of good government.

In extending to this Company our hearty support and co-operation, we will be advancing a movement which is founded upon the most fair and reasonable principles.
