There are various ways of getting into a newspaper. One way is by purchasing an interest, another is by purchasing an interview, while still another is to work for the man who runs the sheet and write his "filler" for him. And still the most popular form of entry is to pull the wool over the editor's eyes and crawl in for nothing.

Misses Selma Peterson and Alice Richards left Wednesday morning for the Twin City and Milwaukee markets, where they will study late styles and purchase their spring and summer stock of millinery. Upon their return they will open in rooms above the Mesaba Meat Market, about March 1st, to which the attention of the ladies of the range will be directed later through the advertising columns of the Enterprise.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found an advertisement of the Consolidated Casualty Co., of Minneapolis, of which Charles Winchester is local agent. The policies of this company are guaranteed by a deposit of $100,000 with the Insurance Department of Minnesota, and pay total and partial disability for a period of two years, specific benefits for loss of life, hands, feet or eyes, sickness indemnity on every known disease, double indemnity for accidents occurring on public conveyances, pays 10 per cent increase on each successive year's renewal for five years and pays indemnity in case of quarantine. A policy of this description is entitled to be carried by every man of family, at least, and is also entitled to the careful consideration of those who have not as yet become blessed with family affairs.
