Valedictory.

Lay me low, my work is done;
I am weary, lay me low,
Where the wild flowers woo the sun,
Where the balmy breezes blow,
Where the butterfly takes wing,
Where the aspens, drooping, grow,
Where the young birds chirp and sing
I am weary; let me go.

I have striven hard and long
In the world's unequal fight,
Always to resist the wrong,
Always to remain the right;
Always with a stubborn heart
Taking, giving blow for blow.
Brother, I have played my part
And am weary; let me go.

Stern the world and bitter cold,
Irk some, painful to endure;
Everywhere a love of gold,
Nowhere pity for the poor;
Everywhere mistrust, disguise,
Pride, hypocrisy and show,
Draw the curtains, close mine eyes;
I am weary; let me go.

Other chance when I am gone
May restore the battle call,
Bravely lead the good cause on,
Fighting in the which I fall.
God may quicken some true soul
Here to take my place below
In the heroes' muster roll—
I am weary; let me go.

Shield and buckler, hang them up,
Draped the standards on the wall,
I have drained the mortal cup
To the finish, dregs and all.
When our work is done 'tis best,
Brother, best that we should go—
I am weary; let me rest;
I am weary; lay me low.
—Adam Lindsay Gordon.

Honor for Miss Griggs.

One of the most complete surprises of the season was given last evening when a number of the young lady friends of Miss Ione Griggs uninvited assembled at her home to celebrate her birthday. The merry company of about eighteen young ladies and gentlemen met at the home of Miss Eva Roller and suspecting that their honor guest might soon have use for the various articles of kitchen ware each one purchased one of these noisy utensils as a birthday (?) gift for Miss Griggs. About the time this army, on pleasure and mischief bent, thought the Griggs parlor would be devoted to a courtship scene they broke love silence with the announcement of their arrival, the rattle and bang of kitchen tin and metal. Though surprised almost beyond expression the ever cordial hostess extended the glad hand of welcome and gave every nook and corner of her home over to the pleasure of her guests. The evening was joyously passed with games and music and a dainty lunch was served. Before good-nights were said the happy hostess was almost compelled to admit that she would be on the June bride list but out her inquiring friends off by saying she had a little secret to tell them at a later date. Among those present were: Misses Edna Naismith, Eva Roller, Gertrude Curry, Coral Free, Lois Robertson, Maude Jackson, Lana Capston, Clara Miller and Mrs. J. L. Yount; Messrs. Lou Bowen, Lou Brennan, Charles Hunt, Clifford Dunham, Willis Buckwalter, Walter Wisner and Prof. Pease.
