The weekly study class of Miss Morton's plano pupils entertained a small number of their friends at her studio Thursday evening. Miss Florence Denny rendered an interesting program of modern compositions consisting of Grieg, Godard, Chaminade and German numbers. The Grieg "Peer Gynt Suite," No. 1, (Miss Morton playing the second part), was much enjoyed as was also "The Butterfly," and "Birdling," which were given with delicacy and artistic finish. The Chaminade numbers, "Pan." by Godard and the "Morris Dance," by German, all displayed tonal-quality, rounding and finishing of phrase, shading and pedalling far above the average. These operas were all 'announced for production last season, but were not given, nor have they been given so far this year. The temaller size of the New theater's auditorium would be of great advantage in the production of operas in the vernacular, as the audience would be better able to understand the enunciation of the text than in the vast spaces of the Mertopolitan. It is therefore not improbable that, in addition to the regular dramatic performances, the New theater will see next season a series of operas sung entirely in the English language.

There have been many suggestions considered recently by the directors of the Metropolitan as to means of reducing the deficit that the company is facing. Among the suggestions has been that of raising the price of seats. One of the directors admitted a few days ago that this suggestion had been discussed, but stated that no decision had as yet been reached.
