

JUNK DEALER KISSES HAND OF OFFICER WHO RESTORES HIS MONEY

When Jacob Litman, a junk dealer, who was in municipal court yesterday on a charge of purchasing junk from boys, was given a sum of $10 by the clerk, which had been taken from his person the night before by the police, when he was arrested, the overjoyed dealer grasped the clerk's hand and fervently imprinted on it a kiss.

He would have gone further if the clerk had allowed the unusual demonstration to get any warmer.

Litman was bound to the grand jury under $250 bonds. The offense of which he is charged carries with it a minimum penalty of six months in the county jail.
