Young Men's Republican Club Holds Enthusiastic Meeting at Steinway Hall.

Party solidity and the straight Republican ticket was the theme of the addresses given last evening by speakers at the meeting of the Young Men's Republican club at the Foresters' hall. A good crowd attended.

The principal speaker was Frank E. Russell, whose address was on "Good Republicanism." He advocated that in casting his ballot the voter should support the entire ticket in order not to handicap the head of the list.

Max Oreckovsky, candidate for alderman of the Fourth ward, told the members that he is working for a five-cent fare on Park Point and also that he intended supporting the bond issue. If the latter carried, he said, he intended to use his utmost effort to carry out the wishes of the people.

Addresses were also given by J. F. Taylor, candidate for alderman in the Third ward and Clement De Roach, candidate in the Seventh ward.

A feature of the meeting was several musical numbers given by Fred A. Adams, who proved himself a full fledged orchestra. He also sang. Next Monday evening he is scheduled to give several political parodies on popular songs.
