

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

DULUTH WOMAN STAR WILL HELP TO READ PAPER OLD WARRIORS

Mrs. P. L. De Voist Will Contribute to Program at State Club Federation Gathering.

MID-WINTER BREAKFAST TO BE NOTABLE EVENT

More Than Six Hundred Guests Will Attend—Duluth to Send a Delegation.

"The Privilege of Middle Age," by Mrs. P. L. De Voist, of 10 Twelfth avenue east, will be Duluth's contribution to the addresses given next Thursday at the Mid-winter breakfast of the Minnesota Federation of Women's clubs at St. Paul.

Other addresses so far arranged are "Vocational Training," by Miss Agnes Stockton, dean of women at the University of Minnesota, who has had a wide opportunity to influence girls in their choice of a vocation; "Folk Songs," by Miss Josephine Broder, of St. Cloud; "Social Centers," by Mrs. T. G. Winter, president of the Woman's club of Minneapolis; and "The Club," by Mrs. M. F. Nugent, of Appleton.

Six hundred guests are expected, as the meeting is open to all members of clubs that belong to the federation. Mrs. K. L. Barrows, Mrs. O. A. Oredson, Mrs. K. A. Osterberg and all other Duluth club women, will attend.

Visiting club women will be given a reception at 11:30 by the local clubs, with Mrs. John L. Schwartz, president of the St. Paul Thursday club as chairman. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock to be followed by musical program arranged by the Schubert club. The addresses will be given at 3 o'clock. There will be three guests of honor, Mrs. Adolph O. Eberhart, Mrs. George Edward Vincent, wife of the president of the University of Minnesota, and Mrs. Fannie French Morse, superintendent of the Girl's Home school at Sauk Centre.

TEMPLE ASSEMBLY LARGELY ATTENDED

Eighty couples attended the Temple assembly's second large dancing party, given last evening at the Masonic temple. The hall was brilliantly decorated with lights and programs decorated with hearts, as the general theme of the Valentine's day celebration suggested. St. Valentine's day was celebrated by the Temple assembly's second large dancing party, given last evening at the Masonic temple.

GERMAN CLUB COTILLION. Clusters of red roses combined with greenery to make a lovely centerpiece for the German club's cotillion, which will transform the Country club into a garden scene this evening when the German club holds its Valentine's cotillion. The cotillion will be big, will be strung from the ceiling and arranged in daintily fantastic patterns, while Mrs. W. N. Ryan, chairman, Thomas Clark Jr., and M. Buchanan.

CLAN STEWART DANCE. Thirty couples attended Clan Stewart's monthly dance last evening at Forester's hall. Those in charge of the affair were Mrs. W. N. Ryan, chairman, Thomas Clark Jr., and M. Buchanan.

AMUSEMENTS

"All the Shivers Will Be There."

LYCEUM—4 Days

Com. Sunday, Feb. 18, Mat. Wednes.

LOUISE GUNNING

"The Balkan Princess"

Nights 10 to 12, Mat. 50c to $1.50.

Seat Sale Opens Today at 10 a. m.

New Opheum

Second Ave. East and Superior St.

THEATRE.

INTERNATIONAL VAUDEVILLE.

Matinees Helen Granley & Co.

25c

Except on Sundays & Holidays.

10c, 15c, 25c, 50c and $1.00.

Next Week

McIntyre & Heath.

The Concert Orchestra.

EMPRESS

"WHERE EVERYBODY GOES."

All This

Week

Adelaide Thurston Will Be One of the Artists at the Concert Friday Night.

LOCAL PEOPLE WILL CONTRIBUTE TALENT

Event at Pilgrim Church Promises to be One of Unusual Excellence.

MRS. FRANK E. PARKER.

One of the Talented Local People Who Will Take Part.

Miss Adelaide Thurston, loved by theatergoers all over the country for her winsome personality as well as for her dainty and graceful acting, gives her services to the Pilgrim church at the G. A. R. concert as a memorial to her father. In speaking of the concert at the Pilgrim Congregational church, she said:

"If my father were living he would like to have me do what I could to help. That is the only reason I am doing it. I really should not on my way to New York. Miss Reynolds' father, also, was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic."

"The Revolutionary Rising," a rousing patriotic poem that deals with a warlike minister, and "The Bridge," give Miss Thurston varied opportunities for her range from light, graceful comedy to intense dramatic moments.

Mrs. Frank E. Parker, Miss Thurston's sister, will strike the comedy note with her Swedish ballad, "Sheridan's Ride," and the Scotch poem, "Imph-Mu." Mrs. Parker will sing, "O Perfect Day," and "Lullaby," has a voice of unusual sweetness.

Mrs. Thornton has appeared often in parlor recitals but the public has not had many opportunities to hear her.

C. O. Applehagen, first bass; Don Gearhart, second bass; Don Cole, tenor; and A. B. Riekman, baritone, and tenor make up the Scottish Irish quartet, the best known vocal quartet in the city. They will sing "In Olden Days," "The Rose Tree," "The Bells of St. Mary's," and "The Bells of St. Mary's."

Miss Gladys Reynolds, the young girl with the fresh sweet soprano voice, has not been heard recently since her return from studying in the east.

PRETTY WEDDING FOR DULUTH YOUNG PEOPLE

At a pretty wedding last evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Joseph Eber, 521 West Fourth street, Miss Alice Forsell and Carl Brown were married by Rev. J. McGowan.

The bride wore white marquisette over white lace, and carried a bouquet of red roses and white lilies of the valley. Miss Margaret Alver, who attended the bride, wore a pink and white gown of all-over embroidery and carried a bouquet of red carnations, smilax and spruce boughs.

After a trip through the east Mr. and Mrs. Eber will be at home in Duluth.

SURPRISE BRIDGE PARTY.

A surprise bridge party, in honor of the birthday of the bride, was given by Mrs. Hunt last evening at her home, 1151 East Second street. Pink and white flowers decorated the eight tables, the prizes were played at by Miss Helen Denham, T. J. Hyde and Mrs. George Lounsbury. Miss Olive Neagoe and Miss Isabelle McVetley presided at the punch bowl.

WILL ENTERTAIN CHOR.

The choir of the United Brethren will be entertained this evening at the home of Mrs. George Bergtold, 2107 East Second street.

VALENTINE DANCE PARTY.

Miss Verne Padden gave a Valentine's dancing party at her home last evening, asking Valentine to decorate the rooms. The guests were: Verne Padden, Violet Padden, Della Sweet,

Ruth Cameron's Daily Talk

They say that if you are willing to buy outright, to wait long enough and to take reasonable gains, you can be practically sure of making money on the stock exchange.

I don't know much about that. My only experience certainly hasn't given me reason for such an opinion.

But I do know of one direction in which, if you wait long enough, are willing to take reasonable gains, you can be practically sure of making money on the stock exchange.

For instance, at the beginning of this winter, she noted down that she would need half a dozen sheets and a dozen towels in the course of the next year. One day in January, she saw an advertisement of the sheets she always uses at 20 per cent less than the ordinary price, and promptly bought a dozen. In February, she found an opportunity to buy 37½ cent towels for 25 cents apiece, half what she had paid for her first towels. She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching, found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25 cents.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 or $30 covers the first of these requirements, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

These lists she keeps in her top bureau drawer, and also, to a certain extent, in her head, and with them in view she makes a systematic study of every advertisement that comes within her reach. During bargain seasons, such as January and August, she takes two or three newspapers in order to keep in touch with all the shops. If any shop has a list of customers to which it sends advertising circulars, she makes sure that her name is on the list.

As a consequence of this systematic bargain hunting, she is able to buy almost everything she uses, at from 20 to 25 per cent under the staple prices.

She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching, found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25 cents.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 or $30 covers the first of these requirements, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

These lists she keeps in her top bureau drawer, and also, to a certain extent, in her head, and with them in view she makes a systematic study of every advertisement that comes within her reach. During bargain seasons, such as January and August, she takes two or three newspapers in

Uncle Walt—The Poet Philosopher

The boy stood on the burning deck a long, long time ago, and people viewed the fire from the burning deck.

THE BURNING DECK said: "I told you forty thousand times to have your ship insured, and now you're punished for your crimes—you'll be well smoked and cured!" Another watched the fire's red raids, and said: "It serves you right. I tried to sell him hand grenades—he simply wouldn't buy."

Esther Sosnovsky, Lillian Lieberman, Miss Ray, Miss Gustafson, Mrs. Walter Armstrong, H. Deitrich, J. H. Latski, S. A. Zander and J. Latski.

MRS. MCGOWAN ELECTED. Mrs. W. A. McGowan has been elected president of the Y. M. C. A. to succeed Mrs. W. C. Ames, who resigned from the active presidency and was succeeded by Mrs. W. A. McGowan.

ROOMS BEAUTIFULY DECORATED. Scarlet tulips, effective red streamers and white streamers, and a pretty festive air to the Spaulding palm room yesterday at the Valentine's matinee.

MET THIS AFTERNOON. The Y. M. C. A. met this afternoon at 2:30 with Mrs. Florence Merritt of 2105 East Second street, and Mrs. C. C. Corcoran in the discussion of "The Crusade and Frances Willard."

NEW ENGLAND DINNER. A New England dinner will be served next evening at the Trinity Cathedral by the Ladies' guild.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW

Mr. and Mrs. Julius H. Barnes, 25 South Twenty-sixth avenue east, have left for California, to return about March 15.

Miss W. A. McGowan, private secretary to County Attorney Norton, returned yesterday from Hibbing, where she attended Tuesday as a witness in the case of the state against Tom McGowan, charged with murder in the first degree.

W. J. Gunkelson of St. Paul, traveling passenger on the Grand Trunk railway system, was in Duluth yesterday, registered at the McKay.

Thomas W. Richmond of Virginia, was in Duluth yesterday, registered at the McKay.

Miss L. Emerson, private secretary to County Attorney Norton, returned yesterday from Hibbing, where she attended Tuesday as a witness in the case of the state against Tom McGowan, charged with murder in the first degree.

W. J. Gunkelson of St. Paul, traveling passenger on the Grand Trunk railway system, was in Duluth yesterday, registered at the McKay.

Thomas W. Richmond of Virginia, was in Duluth yesterday, registered at the McKay.

GLASS BLOCK CHIEF OF DEPARTMENT ARRIVES

J. A. Andrews of Minneapolis has accepted a position as manager of the drapery and rug departments of the Glass Block store. Mr. Andrews comes to the Glass Block from Boston, where he was in charge of the largest drapery houses in the Twin Cities. He will move to Duluth within the next week or two.

Mrs. Anna E. S. Griffith, of Cleveland, Ohio, has taken the management of the beauty parlors at the Glass Block. Mrs. Griffith has just returned from a trip to New York, Cleveland and Chicago in the interest of her department.

S. B. Millard, buyer of jewelry and leather goods for the house, left last night for New York to buy goods for his departments.

Archie Bucher, buyer of china-ware and housefurnishings, is already there buying new goods, as is Donald Young, buyer for several of the departments.

"Everything at a discount." Great Columbia sale this week only.

order to keep in touch with all the shops. If any shop has a list of customers to which it sends advertising circulars, she makes sure that her name is on the list.

As a consequence of this systematic bargain hunting, she is able to buy almost everything she uses, at from 20 to 25 per cent under the staple prices.

For instance, at the beginning of this winter, she noted down that she would need half a dozen sheets and a dozen towels in the course of the next year. One day in January, she saw an advertisement of the sheets she always uses at 20 per cent less than the ordinary price, and promptly bought a dozen. In February, she found an opportunity to buy 37½ cent towels for 25 cents apiece, half what she had paid for her first towels. She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching, found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25 cents.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 or $30 covers the first of these requirements, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

These lists she keeps in her top bureau drawer, and also, to a certain extent, in her head, and with them in view she makes a systematic study of every advertisement that comes within her reach. During bargain seasons, such as January and August, she takes two or three newspapers in order to keep in touch with all the shops. If any shop has a list of customers to which it sends advertising circulars, she makes sure that her name is on the list.

As a consequence of this systematic bargain hunting, she is able to buy almost everything she uses, at from 20 to 25 per cent under the staple prices.

For instance, at the beginning of this winter, she noted down that she would need half a dozen sheets and a dozen towels in the course of the next year. One day in January, she saw an advertisement of the sheets she always uses at 20 per cent less than the ordinary price, and promptly bought a dozen. In February, she found an opportunity to buy 37½ cent towels for 25 cents apiece, half what she had paid for her first towels. She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching, found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25 cents.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 or $30 covers the first of these requirements, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

These lists she keeps in her top bureau drawer, and also, to a certain extent, in her head, and with them in view she makes a systematic study of every advertisement that comes within her reach. During bargain seasons, such as January and August, she takes two or three newspapers in order to keep in touch with all the shops. If any shop has a list of customers to which it sends advertising circulars, she makes sure that her name is on the list.

As a consequence of this systematic bargain hunting, she is able to buy almost everything she uses, at from 20 to 25 per cent under the staple prices.

For instance, at the beginning of this winter, she noted down that she would need half a dozen sheets and a dozen towels in the course of the next year. One day in January, she saw an advertisement of the sheets she always uses at 20 per cent less than the ordinary price, and promptly bought a dozen. In February, she found an opportunity to buy 37½ cent towels for 25 cents apiece, half what she had paid for her first towels. She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching, found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25 cents.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 or $30 covers the first of these requirements, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

These lists she keeps in her top bureau drawer, and also, to a certain extent, in her head, and with them in view she makes a systematic study of every advertisement that comes within her reach. During bargain seasons, such as January and August, she takes two or three newspapers in order to keep in touch with all the shops. If any shop has a list of customers to which it sends advertising circulars, she makes sure that her name is on the list.

As a consequence of this systematic bargain hunting, she is able to buy almost everything she uses, at from 20 to 25 per cent under the staple prices.

For instance, at the beginning of this winter, she noted down that she would need half a dozen sheets and a dozen towels in the course of the next year. One day in January, she saw an advertisement of the sheets she always uses at 20 per cent less than the ordinary price, and promptly bought a dozen. In February, she found an opportunity to buy 37½ cent towels for 25 cents apiece, half what she had paid for her first towels. She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching, found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25 cents.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 or $30 covers the first of these requirements, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

These lists she keeps in her top bureau drawer, and also, to a certain extent, in her head, and with them in view she makes a systematic study of every advertisement that comes within her reach. During bargain seasons, such as January and August, she takes two or three newspapers in order to keep in touch with all the shops. If any shop has a list of customers to which it sends advertising circulars, she makes sure that her name is on the list.

As a consequence of this systematic bargain hunting, she is able to buy almost everything she uses, at from 20 to 25 per cent under the staple prices.

For instance, at the beginning of this winter, she noted down that she would need half a dozen sheets and a dozen towels in the course of the next year. One day in January, she saw an advertisement of the sheets she always uses at 20 per cent less than the ordinary price, and promptly bought a dozen. In February, she found an opportunity to buy 37½ cent towels for 25 cents apiece, half what she had paid for her first towels. She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching, found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25 cents.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 or $30 covers the first of these requirements, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

These lists she keeps in her top bureau drawer, and also, to a certain extent, in her head, and with them in view she makes a systematic study of every advertisement that comes within her reach. During bargain seasons, such as January and August, she takes two or three newspapers in order to keep in touch with all the shops. If any shop has a list of customers to which it sends advertising circulars, she makes sure that her name is on the list.

As a consequence of this systematic bargain hunting, she is able to buy almost everything she uses, at from 20 to 25 per cent under the staple prices.

For instance, at the beginning of this winter, she noted down that she would need half a dozen sheets and a dozen towels in the course of the next year. One day in January, she saw an advertisement of the sheets she always uses at 20 per cent less than the ordinary price, and promptly bought a dozen. In February, she found an opportunity to buy 37½ cent towels for 25 cents apiece, half what she had paid for her first towels. She had the children's next summer wardrobe mostly planned in the fall, and by careful watching, found a chance to buy the gingham for their gingham dresses at 15 cents instead of 25 cents.

Of course, to do all this requires a small surplus in the bank, eternal vigilance and a good deal of time. But $25 or $30 covers the first of these requirements, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

I believe, with my neighbor, that a part of every wife's business is to use her husband's money to the best possible advantage, and surely this systematic bargain hunting is one excellent way of doing that.

These lists she keeps in her top bureau drawer, and also, to a certain extent, in her head, and with them in view she makes a systematic study of every advertisement that comes within her reach. During bargain seasons, such as January and August, she takes two or three newspapers in

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE LYCEUM

Louise Gunning (The Princess Stephanie of Balaria) accompanied by her royal escort, a retinue of seventy-five, which includes the famous chorus of fifty Balkanese beauties, is making a tour of America. After reigning supreme in London for one year and at the Herald Square and Casino theaters in New York for six months, "The Balkan Princess" is meeting with royal ovations in the principal cities of the United States. She will hold her first reception in the course of the evening and will sojourn but for four days commencing Sunday Feb. 18, matinee Wednesday. All the comedians, comedienne and song birds who have been identified with her merry reign in the metropolis will be in attendance in regal attire at this gala festival night at the Lyceum. Invitations, ranging in price from fifty cents to two dollars will be issued at the box office commencing at 10 a. m.

AT THE EMPRESS

WANTS TO LOOK OLD. Here is one woman in the world who wants to look old. She is Mattie Lockette.

Lockette, the dainty little comedienne, who is doing juvenile imitations at the Empress this week. For several years, she was the "sassy" girl in the musical comedy production of the same name. It is a curious thing about girls that when they are under ten, they like to assume long dresses and play "grown-up." Once over ten, nothing of the sort. The little Miss Lockette is different. She is "sweet sixteen," and the nearer a woman approaches 40, the more like a 20-year-old she will act. But little Miss Lockette is different. She wants people to know that she is grown up and says she is tired of hearing people say, "You are a clever kid and when she grows up she sure will be a wonder. I am tired of her." "I will tell you, if I could only look older, not 15 years older, but just a few years more, my happiness would know no bounds."

AT THE ORPHEUM

At the Orpheum this week is a young man, an expert violinist and yet the tips of his first two fingers on his left hand are missing. He is Jay Whidden of the team of Conrad and Whidden, who are appearing in an act consisting of violin and piano eccentricities. Mr. Whidden lost his fingers through an operation made necessary by blood poisoning, brought on by excessive practicing on the violin.

"When I was a lad," said Mr. Whidden, "I was looked upon as a youthful prodigy on the violin. I was very brilliant and practiced almost continuously. One day I continued my work in spite of a rather painful scratch across the tips of my fingers which a cat had given me. The next day my fingers began to swell, and specialists who were called in said that an operation would be necessary to save my hand. The tips of my three fingers were cut off. This, I thought at the time, would end all hope of a musical career for me, and I began to prepare for some other line of work. After the wound healed, I returned to the violin, but more for my own amusement than with any hope of ever playing in public. My fingers were stiff for lack of practice, but gradually they became more limber, and to my delight I realized that the operation had not seriously interfered with my playing. I then went abroad for a course of study. I studied with Frederick in London, and later returned to America and took a year's course with Henry Schradick, one of the most famous teachers of the time. Coming home on the boat I met Mr. Conrad, who was also returning from Europe after taking a couple of years' course in the study of the violin. We formed a partnership. We both needed ready money, and on the boat we arranged an act that we thought would be popular in vaudeville. On our arrival at the Lyceum, we were met by the managers, and secured bookings over the Orpheum circuit, much to our delight. That is now we come to be here. At the end of the act we both hope to return and put in another year of study abroad."

AT THE ORPHEUM

At the Orpheum this week is a young man, an expert violinist and yet the tips of his first two fingers on his left hand are missing. He is Jay Whidden of the team of Conrad and Whidden, who are appearing in an act consisting of violin and piano eccentricities. Mr. Whidden lost his fingers through an operation made necessary by blood poisoning, brought on by excessive practicing on the violin.

"When I was a lad," said Mr. Whidden, "I was looked upon as a youthful prodigy on the violin. I was very brilliant and practiced almost continuously. One day I continued my work in spite of a rather painful scratch across the tips of my fingers which a cat had given me. The next day my fingers began to swell, and specialists who were called in said that an operation would be necessary to save my hand. The tips of my three fingers were cut off. This, I thought at the time, would end all hope of a musical career for me, and I began to prepare for some other line of work. After the wound healed, I returned to the violin, but more for my own amusement than with any hope of ever playing in public. My fingers were stiff for lack of practice, but gradually they became more limber, and to my delight I realized that the operation had not seriously interfered with my playing. I then went abroad for a course of study. I studied with Frederick in London, and later returned to America and took a year's course with Henry Schradick, one of the most famous teachers of the time. Coming home on the boat I met Mr. Conrad, who was also returning from Europe after taking a couple of years' course in the study of the violin. We formed a partnership. We both needed ready money, and on the boat we arranged an act that we thought would be popular in vaudeville. On our arrival at the Lyceum, we were met by the managers, and secured bookings over the Orpheum circuit, much to our delight. That is now we come to be here. At the end of the act we both hope to return and put in another year of study abroad."

AT THE ORPHEUM

At the Orpheum this week is a young man, an expert violinist and yet the tips of his first two fingers on his left hand are missing. He is Jay Whidden of the team of Conrad and Whidden, who are appearing in an act consisting of violin and piano eccentricities. Mr. Whidden lost his fingers through an operation made necessary by blood poisoning, brought on by excessive practicing on the violin.

"When I was a lad," said Mr. Whidden, "I was looked upon as a youthful prodigy on the violin. I was very brilliant and practiced almost continuously. One day I continued my work in spite of a rather painful scratch across the tips of my fingers which a cat had given me. The next day my fingers began to swell, and specialists who were called in said that an operation would be necessary to save my hand. The tips of my three fingers were cut off. This, I thought at the time, would end all hope of a musical career for me, and I began to prepare for some other line of work. After the wound healed, I returned to the violin, but more for my own amusement than with any hope of ever playing in public. My fingers were stiff for lack of practice, but gradually they became more limber, and to my delight I realized that the operation had not seriously interfered with my playing. I then went abroad for a course of study. I studied with Frederick in London, and later returned to America and took a year's course with Henry Schradick, one of the most famous teachers of the time. Coming home on the boat I met Mr. Conrad, who was also returning from Europe after taking a couple of years' course in the study of the violin. We formed a partnership. We both needed ready money, and on the boat we arranged an act that we thought