"ARTAXERXES"

"Artaxerxee," the musical eragiven by the pupils of the Most Montefore Hebrew school lates, and yevening at the Lyceum, powed a pleasant surprise to the safetee. Little was known of the play, that it had been written by Rabil E. Horowitz especially for the pupils. The author has given the stoy of

The second act, at Mordecal's home, shows Esther kindling the lights for the Sabbath. The saloon scene in this act indicates that here the place indicates that here the place indicates that here the place against the king's life was formed. The synagogue scene in the fourth

The synagogue scene in the fourth act was notable. Jews and Jersess with their children were gathered by pray, and the conversation between parents and children was delightide rest of the act falling below the part in excellence. The dram's upone to give plenty of scope to matra and professional actors, so that its work of the children was prise worthy and at times excellent.

Master Abe Oreckowsky read the prologue, and between acts Miss East, Salk, Miss Sadie Gingold, Naisa Cook and H. G. Lovicjk gave muscal selections that were highly-appreciated.
