

OLD-TIME RANGE MEN PASS AWAY

"It seems somewhat of a coincidence that three of the old-time Vermillion range men, and personal friends, should have died within three months of each other," said J. A. Semer of Escanaba yesterday.

"These were A. E. Camp, who died in the west, James Sheridan, who died in Duluth, and my father, John Semer, who died in Florida."

Mr. Semer was at the St. Louis en route home from an inspection of the Vermillion range properties of the Semer estate. Several properties were owned by the late John Semer, who was a pioneer Vermillion range man.

It is understood that some of the lands owned by the Semer estate may be taken over under option for drilling and other manner of exploration.
