of the recipient.

Marcus has communicated with people in Russia for the last two years, but this is the first letter he has received from Russia that was written in any language except the Russian. Letters written in liebrew or Yiddish language were not permitted to circulate under Czar Nicholas' regims, acording to Mrs. Givovaki, who resides in the Novoziykadistrict in the central part of Russianic of the contral part of Russianic district in the central part of Russianic Marcus and Contral part of Russianic Marcus Alexandre Marcus A

"You can't imagine what freedom we enjoy," writes Mrs. Givovski. She was in Duluth in 1910 and has been in other parts of the United States a number of years before going back to number of years before going back to Russia.

"We did not expect this favorable change would be wrought with so little bloodshed," she says. "The Jews are now on an equal footing with the rest of the nationalities in this large, free, democratic Russia. We fear only Germany. With the overthrow of Germany our freedom is assured, but not until this barbarous nation is doomed can we say that Russia is free.

"The allying of the United States with Russia has caused great happiness in this district and I suppose it is the same with the other districts." All other communications which have been received by Marcus have been smeared over with ink by the censor. This is the first one that he has received without these marks.
