

Prominent Duluth Girl ARRIVES IN U.S. \Younger Set Girls Find Peddles Soap for College Fund.

FROM NORTHAMPTON comes the information that for the first time in the history of the Smith college, the citizens of the city and vicinity and the college, authorities have come to odds regarding a college policy. The trouble was started when a number of the residents of Northhampton. Easthampton and Westfield openly declared their disapproval of the Smith college students peddling their wares of soap and cleansing fluids through the streets of those cities in the aid of their drive for the Smith endowment fund of $4,000,000.

The young women, among whom is numbered a prominent member of Duluth's younger set, have also canvassed from house to house and have had remarkable success in their efforts. The joint protests from a few citizens evidently firm believers in the old blue law and with but little sense of fairness to the young women, have caused the entire campaign to be withdrawn thus avertine what promised to become a grave crisis through court action.

Work as Substitute Teachers.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES have been few and far between during the past and far between during the past weeks. Ewen the informal teapparties and afternoon at bridge did not seem to fill the need. Time has hung heavy on the hands of the younger set who are usually active. They have learned the joy of work and earning through their recent efforts in behalf of the King's Paugh. They have learned the joy of work and earning through their recent efforts in behalf of the King's Daughter's fund, and so they have been on the look out for something worth while to do. As is usually the case, having begun the hunt, they have found what they sought. Several of their number began the work and according to reports from headquarters they are making good, now the other members of their crowd as clamoring for an opportunity to show what they can do.

The work is substituting in the public schools. It is trite to say that it is an ill wind that blows no good, but the impulse which caused these college trained girls to desire an outlet for their surplus energy, has brought to the school system a group of efficient substitutes at a time when the need was greatest.
