

Political "Boss" of Slippery Gulch Spurns Mayor's Job

ALBERT H. POLINSKY.

Discovered—the political "boss" of Slippery Gulch.

Albert H. Polinsky, general chairman of the Legion-Elks charity jamboree at the Armory opening Saturday evening, is said to be the man behind the throne in the affairs of the mining "town" of '49.

There is talk of a special election with the object of running Mr. Polinsky for "mayor" but the "boss" yesterday smilingly declined, intimating that he preferred the private life of citizen to that of politician. However, it is conceded that Mr. Polinsky is the prime mover in the big frolic which will entertain the public for seven "wild, wicked nights."

"While there will be a reproduction of life in the early frontier days," Mr. Polinsky said last night, "I wish to make clear to the general public that there will be nothing offensive or rough in the entertainment. Everything will be burlesque on a mining camp, and the snappiest situations will be relieved by humor which will make the jamboree so popular."

Dancing and fun every night is the order with the lid lifted to the limit.
