

The day of "Mr. Blank and wife," as a hotel registry has passed. The wife has become a consequential factor in her own right, and, upon hotel records, in her own name. Leading hotels now require a professional woman to register both ways, that is, as the wife of her husband and as herself. For example: "Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks (Miss Mary Pickford)." When the wife is the more prominent, she sometimes registers with her own name first, as "Miss Mary Pickford and husband, Mr. Douglas Fairbanks."

The wisdom of this course is apparent to anyone who attempts to reach professional women at hotels. No wonder hotel rates have increased. Think of all the cross indexing, extra bookkeeping and enlarged staff required to keep mail, accounts, telephone calls and personal messages straight with this complication.

We will soon be as advanced as China.

To retain one's maiden name is quite the thing in China and has been for centuries. There the woman has the choice of keeping her maiden name after marriage. Only friends has the choice of keeping her maiden name by her husband's name, and very often a husband still refers to his wife as Miss Blank, her maiden name.

THE PRINCIPLES OF INTERIOR DECORATING were the subject of a most interesting and instructive talk given yesterday afternoon by John L. Kelle, at the F. S. Kelly Furniture company's store at 17 West Superior street. About 200 women attended the talk which was most eagerly gotten up. First stating the general principles of decoration governing color, form and use, Mr. Kelle began by choosing the walls and draperies of a room and building up a complete living room around a fireplace. The method of placing each piece of furniture in an awkward position first, enabled those present to grasp more quickly the application of the principles.

These talks, which are given without cost to the hearers, are the opening lectures of the second tour of the Kelle under the auspices of the Garfield Linen Rug company, and which will take him to the western coast, through the south, returning to New York city late in the spring. The second in the series will be given at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, and will consist of the arranging of a dining room, followed by a questionnaire.
