SAFETY AND SERVICE

FEATURED IN THE HEADLINES?

No, not good bonds. Their course is so smooth, so devoid of startling ups and downs, they rarely qualify as "front page stuff."

Let sensational antics draw the big type. The discerning investor prefers to read of his investment in the small type accorded a mere statement of steadily increasing earnings. That's why he sticks to good bonds.

And why not make good bonds—"bank approved" securities such as we are always glad to suggest—a part of your investment program for 1934?

Bayhood's Big Goal

It may be a bit far fetched for parents to raise every boy with the Bayhood in view, but it is better to suggest the improbable than to see children grow to speak to them in a disparaging and discouraging way about their future prospects.—American Magazine.

One, Two, Three and Out

Doctor Clarke, a well-known Irish theologian, was an early riser. A young preacher wanted a doctor to tell him how he managed to do it. "Do you pray about it?" he asked. "No," said Doctor Clarke. "I get up."—Christian Advocate.

Don't Be a Fool

If you are mad at some one, write a very mean letter to him. After having written the letter, you will feel better. But don't mail the letter. Read it over once more to yourself, and discover what an ass you are, and then tear it up.—Atchison Globe.

Safety Saw

For use by electricians who might have occasion to cut a cable with a current passing through it, a saw is made which is entirely insulated, so that the operation is attended by no danger whatever. The frame consists of a strong material which resists the passage of the electricity.

First Effective Submarine

The Confederate Hundefly was a true diving craft. On February 17, 1864, she blew up the United States steamship Housatonic. The Hundefly went down with her victim. This was the first success of a submarine's action with a warship and the only one until the World war.

Can't Compete

Intellect and character, declares Abe Martin, Farm and Fireside, cannot combat the widespread exploitation of physical charms.
