Niece Lauds Her Uncle Grant McMahan of Ely.

A niece of Grant McMahan, who writes "My Column" in the Lyon, Nebraska Mirror-Sun of which Chas. A. Walton, the husband of the writer is the editor, in the August 6 edition has the following to say: "I am very happy to report about my uncle, Grant McMahan of Ely, Minnesota, although in very poor health, has collected over 500 pounds of tin foil, lead foil and aluminum for the Red Cross in Ely. He had to his credit a short time ago, 284 pounds of foil, mostly from cigarette packages and it takes 400 cigarette packages to make one pound. He started his campaign in February and since that time has stripped over 114,000 cigarette packages. A newspaper columnist and radio commentator of the Northwest, in a talk recently called him the "Tin Foil King" as he had the largest collection of any town in the state of Minnesota, according to its size. When you think what one can do even in poor health it makes us who are physically fit feel very humble."
