Woodbridge's 'Dream City'

Woodbridge's proposed $200 million development, revealed yesterday by Mayor Walter Zirpolo and S. Buddy Harris, the sprawling township's director of planning and development, is shown in model. The clusters of integrated buildings occupy 409 acres of what are now abandoned clay pits. The complex, designed by teams of graduate students of architecture at Columbia University, will house 15.000 residents and provide for a shopping center, office buildings, a 200room hotel, a civic center and five levels of underground parking. The tall structure overlooking the artificial lake in the background represents the hotel. At upper right is circular enclosed stadium. This scale model was displayed yesterday at the S. Klein department store on Route 1.
