Thanksgiving Day, Nineteen Eighteen a Most Remarkable and Momentous National Occasion

For this store to properly express itself, and to give full meaning, and a full definition of what Thanksgiving Day, Nineteen-Eighteen, means to the people of the United States, is, we believe, a very difficult task.

Thanksgiving Day, Nineteen-Eighteen, is so totally different from any Thanksgiving we have celebrated in the past fifty years, that it is truly a day worthy of careful, serious thoughts, and a day in which to render thanks to God that peace reigns over the earth once more.

And we think then that the occasion for the ending of the war is truly an excellent reason for celebrating Thanksgiving Day, Nineteen-Eighteen, in a most glorious manner. Yes, we have very, very much to be thankful for.

Let us be thankful first that we live in the U. S. A. Then let us be thankful too, equally as much—that the ravages and sorrows, miseries, bloodshed and the ruin of this unspokeable war have been spared to the fair land of America.

Let us be thankful that we Americans have the grit, the ability and the efficiency to demonstrate unto the world that although we are, a peace-loving people, we were able to build, in the short space of one year, or possibly less than one year, a military organization, with all the attendant steel and munitions-making and the building of ships in a manner that has startled the world. We have proved, as if it were a message to all mankind, to all the world, that if America was ever threatened by an invading force, there would be an uprising of both men and women, to an extent never before dreamed of—they would rise phoenix-like one hundred million strong overnight, ready to sacrifice and die that this Government of the people and by the people shall never perish from the earth.

And so let us be thankful and give thanks unto God on this Thanksgiving Day, formally set aside by the President of the United States as a national day of thanksgiving.
