

Blue Streak Knocks Em Over at Orpheum

RAE SAMUELS.

That inimitable singing comedienne Rae Samuels, is at the Orpheum theater, and is presenting her latest cycle of song hits, assisted, as is the custom, by Miss Bertha Walker, pianist.

There are few Orpheum artists as popular with their audiences as Rae Samuels. She has a knack of making people want to reach up and shake hands with her while she is singing. Or they want to do something else equally as out of place such as calling her by her first name when they pass her on the street. When she is singing a song she has the audience with her and if she wants them to laugh she points a finger at them or winks or smirks, or anything. They are at her bidding, and they are glad to remain.

Miss Samuels' songs are specially adapted to her and her methods. And with her new assortment of ditties is that irresistible buoyancy that characterizes her work always.
