Dr. S. N. Deinard, 48, Minneapolis Jewish Reform Temple Rabbi, Dies

Distinguished Citizen, Well Known in Duluth, Succumbs to Heart Illness.

News of the death early yesterday of Dr. S. N. Deinard, rabbi of the Jewish Reform temple, Minneapolis, was received in Duluth during Day of Atonement services. He had died of heart disease at the age of 48 following a slight illness caused by a cold.

Dr. Deinard was widely known throughout the northwest, particularly in this city where he appeared during the war in the interest of patriotic work including Liberty loan drives and relief activities. He had been rabbi of the Minneapolis temple 20 years.

Visited in Duluth.

His last visit to Duluth was on Oct. 9, 1929, when he was principal speaker at the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. H. Silberstein.

E. A. Silberstein yesterday expressed profound grief at the news of Dr. Deinard's death. "Dr. Deinard was a very remarkable man," he said, "and he accomplished extraordinary deeds beyond the sphere of his congregation."

In Minneapolis Dr. Deinard was active in civic affairs. Since Minneapolis adopted a home rule charter, he became a strong advocate of an entirely new charter, enlisting as a member of the New Charter League and speaking frequently on conservative but complete changes in the city government.

Planned to Aid Jobless.

He was also a member of the citizens' unemployment committee appointed by Mayor George E. Leach. He had announced taking an active part in assisting Minneapolis unemployed.

Dr. Deinard was born in Lithuania. When he was 10 years old his parents moved to Palestine. At the age of 17 he went to Germany to attend school and at 20 he came to the United States, entering the University of Pennsylvania.

When he was 23 years old he came to Minneapolis, after completing service as rabbi in Terra Haute, Ind., and Chicago. He also was instructor in Semitic languages at the University of Minnesota.

Widely Known Worker.

He was among the best known Jewish workers in America. He had made several pilgrimages to Palestine, later lecturing on Jerusalem and the Holy Land. More recently he had been editor of the American Jewish World, a Minneapolis weekly.

Funeral services have been deferred pending the arrival of his sons from Harvard University where they are law school students. The widow, a daughter, Miriam, and the sons, Benedict and Amos, survive.
